Subtlety was not a hallmark of these campaigns. Of particular note, the books of chivalry that so occupy Don Quixote's time and mind have not yet, Don Diego states, "entrado por los umbrales de mis puertas" II, 16, In stark contrast to Don Diego 's mesura, Don Quixote is so taken by his books of chivalry that he sells off most of his possessions in order to feed his addiction, and ultimately decides to imitate their model. So I brought my dog out with me and I went out to check them and saw the biggest, fattest, ugliest possum I've ever seen in my life.
